A wall made of non-combustible material that helps prevent the spread of fire in a building is called a:

How often should you check for updates to your anti-virus software?

What organization collects complaints on various cybercrimes?

A con artist who wants to gain your personal information through social networks. What is this called?

If you believe your computer is infected with spyware, which federal agency would like to know?

What is the purpose of a search engine?

A single request from a Web browser to view a web page is typically called:

Bandwidth is usually measured as:

If you notice a barrage of pop-ups, your browser takes you to random sites, your computer has been infected with:

In order to cut back on junk mail and telemarketing calls you receive:

You mark a specific site on the Internet for easy access later. This process is called a:

The CPU, RAM and Cache are all plugged into the:

This device connects two or more networks:

A hardware device connected to a computer by a cable is known as a:

Software that has a license allowing the use/redistribution of copies is called:

The period of time after the business day during which cell phone carriers often charge less for airtime is known as:

Which federal agency was the first to use the popular social media site Tumblr?

A video journal uploaded to the internet is called a:

What symbol precedes a word or phrase to denote that that word or phrase is a "hashtag"?

Where are you most likely to find the blogosphere?

Disk drives and display screens are examples of what type of computer technology?

Fake anti-virus software, click fraud, and drive-by downloads are examples of:

Software that is available for use at no monetary cost is called: